Who Can Serve as a Proctor?

Thank you for volunteering to serve as a proctor. Proctors serve as additional monitors to help test administrators assure that testing occurs fairly.

Proctors are responsible adult community members (i.e., age 18 or older and not enrolled as a student in the K–12 public school system), school staff, or school system staff.

Proctors should not be assigned to proctor in rooms where their relatives or wards are to be tested. Relatives and wards include children, stepchildren, grandchildren, nieces, nephews, siblings, in-laws, and persons under the proctor's guardianship. Additionally, proctors should not be assigned to proctor with test administrators who are family members or close acquaintances.

What Are the Responsibilities of a Proctor?

Proctors are required to attend a proctor training session at the school before the test session. Proctors are required to read and become familiar with the Testing Code of Ethics before being assigned to a test administration. Special attention should be given to understanding the sanctions in the Testing Code of Ethics. Proctors assist the test administrator with the following responsibilities:

1. Maintaining Test Security at All Times

Except for students being tested, test books and online test questions are not to be read or reviewed by anyone, at any time. An exception to this rule would be when students with documented special needs require an accommodation, such as Test Read Aloud (in English), or when there is express permission from the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction (NCDPI).

School personnel and proctors must neither disclose the contents of secure tests nor discuss with each other or with students any specific test questions or information contained within the tests or write about them on the internet or social media sites.

Proctors are not allowed to distribute or collect materials, to read directions, to provide any type of assistance to students in choosing responses, or to code or review information on answer sheets and header sheets.

2. Ensuring Physical Conditions in Testing Rooms Are Appropriate

Personal cell phones and all other electronic devices must not be used during the test administration, including breaks. Before testing begins, proctors must turn off their personal cell phones and electronic devices and ensure these devices are not visible during testing, including breaks.

Proctors should work with test administrators to ensure distractions and interruptions during test administrations are minimized and order is maintained.

All rooms designated for testing must be quiet, orderly, and comfortable with adequate seating, lighting, heating, and cooling. Any displays related to the content being measured or test-taking strategies must be covered or removed.

Each student should have enough space in which to work. Seating should be arranged to discourage students from sharing responses. Students are not permitted to access personal belongings during testing, including breaks.

Students are not allowed to use or have in their possession cell phones or any other electronic devices at any time during testing, including breaks. If any student is found or observed with a cell phone or electronic device during testing time, the school test coordinator must be contacted and the student dismissed from testing. If the test administrator or proctor believes a cell phone or electronic device was used during the test administration to store or exchange information or to make an image of the test, the device must be collected from the student and the school test coordinator contacted immediately.

3. Ensuring Materials Are Distributed Appropriately

Test administrators should place test materials on students' desks as directed by the script in the test administration guide (except for approved supplemental materials or designated features such as highlighters, colored pencils, or color acetate overlays).

- Students are not to have any electronic devices (unless testing on an authorized device for an online test) or resources that may provide assistance or an unfair advantage during the test administration.

Exceptions:

- Students may place color acetate overlays over the test book during the paper administration of state tests. This does not give an unfair advantage to students; an overlay simply helps some students see the print more clearly.
- Students may use highlighters and colored pencils in the test books, but they must not use these items to record their answers on the answer sheets.
- Students requiring the Student Marks Answers in Test Book

accommodation do not use an answer sheet during testing. Therefore, in order to provide them with equitable access to the demands of the constructed response or mathematics gridded response questions, these students may receive a sample copy of the Annual Testing Program's constructed response space or mathematics grid during testing.

- Students who complete the test before the scheduled time is over must be provided the opportunity to read novels or other nontextbooks (e.g., magazines) while other students continue to work during the scheduled time. All testing materials should be collected from a student before the student is allowed to read.

4. Ensuring Appropriate Test Administration Procedures Are Followed

While test administrators are reading directions to students, proctors may assist students in finding the correct place on the answer sheet, in the test book, or on the device (for online administrations). Proctors should avoid distracting behaviors during the test session. During the test, proctors should walk frequently and quietly throughout the room and help the test administrator monitor the test administration.

For paper administrations, proctors can check to ensure each student is working in the appropriate section of the test and recording responses in the appropriate section of the answer sheet. Test administrators will assist students in the event misalignment occurs during the paper administration, if necessary.

For online administrations, proctors should notify the test administrator if a student has a problem such as a network malfunction or a question that fails to load properly. (Only test administrators can assist students with computer problems and answer any student's procedural questions [e.g., those concerning the web browser, app, toolbar, navigation buttons, review screen], but they cannot provide any specific assistance with answering test questions.)

5. Assisting Students with Emergencies and Restroom Breaks

If a student must leave the room during a test administration because of an emergency, proctors should assist the test administrator as appropriate so the situation can be handled with as little disturbance to other students as possible. If the test administrator must leave the room, the school test coordinator must be notified. A trained test administrator must be in the room at all times during the test administration.

6. Monitoring Students During the Test Session

A primary responsibility of a proctor is to monitor the test administration. This entails walking frequently and quietly throughout the room.

7. Ensuring Accommodations Are Provided Appropriately

Before proctoring a test administration in which students with disabilities, students identified as English Learners (ELs), or students with transitory impairments receive accommodations, proctors should review with the test administrator any information needed regarding the students' accommodations. Information that should be discussed includes the following:

- the type of accommodation(s) the student(s) will receive,
- how the test administration may differ from what is considered a standard administration, and
- the special procedures necessary to provide the accommodation(s).

8. Reporting All Testing Irregularities

Proctors must report any supposed testing irregularity or testing violation to the school test coordinator or principal on the day of the occurrence. It is critical that the report is made immediately. A list of possible testing irregularities or violations is available in Appendix A of this guide.

9. Maintaining Student Confidentiality

Caution and care must be taken to maintain student confidentiality. Any information about individual students learned while proctoring is considered confidential. Proctors must not disclose any personally identifiable information (PII) about students to anyone beyond what is required while attending to their proctoring responsibilities. Students are protected by federal privacy laws.

A: Testing Room, Testing Violations, and Irregularities

The use of the following items in the testing room will constitute a misadministration or violation of the Testing Code of Ethics. On days before testing, teachers are expected to announce to students which items cannot be accessed in the testing room.

Electronic devices. Students are not allowed to use or have in their possession cell phones or any other electronic recording, listening, scanning, communication, or photographic devices at any time during testing, including breaks. Any student found or observed with a cell phone or electronic device during testing time must be dismissed from testing and a misadministration declared for that student.

- If a student must be removed from testing because he or she has a cell phone or electronic device during testing, the test administrator must not leave the testing room unattended, but rather must notify the school test coordinator to see that the student removed.
- Before testing begins, test administrators and proctors must turn off their personal cell phones or electronic devices and ensure these devices are neither used nor visible during testing, including breaks.
- Personal belongings. Personal belongings are allowed in the testing room. However, students must not be permitted to access them at any time during testing, including breaks.
 - Students who complete the test before the scheduled time is over must be provided with the opportunity to read novels or other nontextbooks (e.g., magazines) while waiting for other students to finish the test. For paper administrations, test administrators must collect student answer sheets, test books, and all ancillary materials (e.g., used papers) before students can take out their reading materials. For online assessments, test administrators must ensure students have clicked the End Test button to close the test and must collect all ancillary materials (e.g., used papers) before students can take out their reading materials.
- Testing aids. Textbooks, reference books, thesauruses, wearable activity trackers, smartwatches, smartpens, music, notes, bookmarks, personal learning devices, or any unapproved testing aids are prohibited for use during testing.

Test administrators must remain attentive to their testing responsibilities throughout the entire administration. Reading (except for the test administration guide or supplemental testing policy information); grading papers; using a computer, cell phone, or other electronic device; talking casually with a proctor or other staff; or engaging in any activity in the testing room not directly related to the test administration is not allowed.

Details regarding what constitutes a testing violation or irregularity and information concerning how to report incidents should be discussed during training. Test administrators must report any alleged testing violation or testing irregularity to the school test coordinator on the day of the occurrence. Examples of testing irregularities include, but are not limited to, the following:

Eligibility Issues

- Eligible students were not tested
- Ineligible students were tested

- Test administrator or proctor giving improper assistance during the test

Technical Issues (Online Testing)

- Online test connectivity or technical problems
 - Schools must report online test connectivity and technical problems that occur during the administration of online tests only when a student(s) is not able to successfully complete the test. Reports do not need to be entered for students who successfully complete the test despite a technical issue.
- Online test questions not displaying properly

B: Testing Code of Ethics

Introduction to the Testing Code of Ethics

In North Carolina, standardized testing is an integral part of the educational experience of all students. When properly administered and interpreted, test results provide an independent, uniform source of reliable and valid information, which enables:

- students to know the extent to which they have mastered expected knowledge and skills and how they compare to others;
- parents to know if their children are acquiring the knowledge and skills needed to succeed in a highly competitive job market;
- teachers to know if their students have mastered grade or course-level knowledge and skills in the curriculum and, if not, what weaknesses need to be addressed;
- community leaders and lawmakers to know if students in North Carolina schools are improving their performance over time and how the students compare with students from other states or the nation; and
- citizens to assess the performance of the public schools.

In order to achieve those objectives, teachers and administrators must conduct testing in a fair and ethical manner, which includes:

Security

- assuring adequate security of the testing materials before, during, and after testing and during scoring
- assuring student confidentiality

Preparation

- teaching the tested curriculum and test-preparation skills
- training staff in appropriate testing practices and procedures
- providing an appropriate atmosphere

Administration

- developing a local policy for the implementation of fair and ethical testing practices and for resolving questions concerning those practices
- assuring all students who should be tested are tested
- utilizing tests which are developmentally appropriate
- utilizing tests only for the purposes for which they were designed

Scoring, Analysis, and Reporting

- interpreting test results to the appropriate audience
- providing adequate data analyses to guide curriculum implementation and improvement

Standardized test scores are only one of the many indicators of how well the student is learning. Test scores should be used in conjunction with all other available information about a student to understand student progress and improve student learning. When administering tests, school administrators and teachers must comply with applicable statutes, rules and policies. In particular, administrators and teachers must comply with the Testing Code of Ethics (16 N.C. Admin. Code 6D .0311), which is printed on the following page.

Test data help educators understand educational patterns and practices. The superintendent shall ensure that school personnel analyze and report test data ethically and within the limitations described in this paragraph.
 - (1) Educators shall maintain the confidentiality of individual students. Publicizing test scores or any written material containing personally identifiable information from the student's educational records shall not be disseminated or otherwise made available to the public by any member of the State Board of Education, any employee of the State Board of Education, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, any employee of the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction, any member of a local board of education, any employee of a local board of education, or any other person, except as permitted under the provisions of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, 20 U.S.C. §1232g.
